“I regularly hear from Long Island residents that they’re struggling to make ends meet as costs for everyday goods and essentials keep rising. That’s why I worked hard to ensure this year’s state budget directs much-needed tax relief to middle-class New Yorkers. We all deserve to be able to afford to live in the communities that we love. There is still more work to be done, but you can count on me to deliver policies and investments that help more people to stay in our great state.”
