ORAL TESTIMONY BY INVITATION ONLY

According to the National Council for Behavioral Health, drug overdoses and suicides have overtaken traffic accidents as the two leading causes of death among young Americans ages 25-44. Additionally, the American Foundation for Suicide Prevention stated that suicide is the 12th leading cause of death in New York. In 2020, for every 100,000 New Yorkers, approximately 8 people lose their life to suicide; it is the second leading cause of death for people between the ages of 10 and 34 years old; and for individuals between the ages of 35 and 54, suicide is the fourth leading cause of death.

Over the past several years, New York State has made an effort to expand mental health crisis services, which includes short term crisis residences, crisis respite services, mobile crisis teams, and crisis intervention training for law enforcement officers. In this year’s enacted budget, the legislature authorized the establishment of crisis stabilization centers, to divert individuals experiencing or at risk of a mental health crisis away from hospitalization.

Additionally, there has been national interest to shift away from police led responses for people experiencing a mental health crisis in their community and instead dispatch trained mental health professionals, that would attempt to de-escalate, stabilize, or transport an individual to the appropriate level of behavioral health care.

Also, in 2020, the federal government enacted the National Suicide Prevention Hotline Improvement Act, which established a national suicide prevention and behavioral health crisis hotline. This new “988” hotline is expected to be implemented nationwide by July 2022 and will aim to create a community crisis response system for suicide prevention and mental health crisis services equivalent to what “911” is for medical, fire and public safety emergencies.

This hearing will provide the committees an opportunity to receive testimony on New York’s current mental health crisis service delivery system, examine the effectiveness of other mental health crisis service models, and consider policies and other initiatives which aim to improve the response to mental health crises and the need for resources to help enhance the delivery mental health crisis services in New York State.
